FALL 2026

patagonia®

Eight days a week

We’re in business to save our home planet.

This is the challenge Yvon Chouinard gave Patagonia when he updated our reason for being in 2018 for the first time in years. It’s a lofty goal, and one that shapes every item of clothing, every donation, every activist campaign. It’s also one we’ll never reach on our own.

Patagonia Group Sales is one way we get professionals all over the world involved in solving our intertwined social and environmental crisis. Through the program, like-minded companies can outfit their teams with products that not only offer top-tier performance but also are built using recycled fabrics and designed for repairability, to reduce the need for virgin materials and to extend their life span as much as possible. Many are made in Fair Trade Certified[®] factories, to support the workers who make them, and many are also made with fibers like organic cotton or hemp, which are grown with lower environmental impacts than conventional crops.

We also believe that a product’s life span shouldn’t be limited to business hours. So, choose the best gear for your team—from waterproof outerwear to quick-wicking tech tees to our rugged equipment line—knowing it will keep them warm, dry and comfortable through the workweek and on any out-of-office trips through the weekend.

You’re proud of your employees. We’re proud to help them enjoy the planet as passionately as they’re working to save it, during business hours and beyond.

Customer Testimonial

“Our work brings us to remote rivers in all corners of the US, and during all seasons. Sometimes, we are thrashing through dense willow brush and thorny blackberries in the heat of late summer. Other times, we’re tested by unrelenting, bone-chilling rains in the Pacific Northwest. When we’re lucky, it’s somewhere in between. We regularly use Patagonia packs, jackets and layers to keep us comfortable (and stylish) in all conditions.”

—Kristen Godkin, Development Director, Inter-Fluve

No business on a dead planet

Being a 1% for the Planet® member and Certified B Corp.

Why did Yvon Chouinard update our official purpose statement to “We’re in business to save our home planet”? It’s because we believe business can play a crucial role in stopping the myriad threats facing life on Earth, but only if those businesses take concrete action toward protecting the well-being of our planet and its denizens. We also believe such efforts mustn’t come at the cost of success. In fact, history has proved they can even strengthen a company’s bottom line ... and help save the planet in the process.

Since 1985, Patagonia has been giving money to grassroots organizations defending, protecting and restoring the natural world. We expanded that commitment in 1996, when we pledged to donate 1 percent of our sales; in 2002, Chouinard and Craig Mathews, owner of Blue Ribbon Flies, founded 1% for the Planet®, a nonprofit that encourages other businesses to follow their example. The organization now has over 11,000 members—from companies like New Belgium Brewing to individuals like musician Jack Johnson—who’ve donated more than $870 million to domestic and international grassroots environmental groups.

We took another more holistic step in December 2011 when we became a Certified B Corporation, and in January 2012 we formally registered as the first benefit corporation in the state of California. B Corp certification means our company’s overall environmental and social performance has been measured and independently verified by third-party company B Lab. Their evaluation goes beyond products or even the supply chain, encompassing a company’s operations, business model, community impact, materials, charitable donations, employee benefits and—as Chouinard noted—even its purpose statement.

On September 14, 2022, Patagonia announced a new ownership model. “We’re making Earth our only shareholder,” said founder Yvon Chouinard. Now, every dollar that is not reinvested into Patagonia will be distributed as dividends to protect the planet. Nancy Pastor

Capilene® Cool Sun

“Our goal was to make the most breathable sun-protection fabric possible.”

—Mackenzie Warner, Material Operations Developer

Details

UPF by Construction

Fabric’s single-knit construction generates a sun-protective effect that won’t wash out over time, and its innovative yarn blocks both UVA and UVB rays.

Quick Dry & Moisture Wicking

Lightweight fabric provides quick-drying moisture control and has a wicking finish and a textured back to lift the fabric off the skin for better airflow.

All-Day Comfort

All Capilene® Cool Sun styles have minimal stitching and seams for enhanced comfort and reduced chafing during all-day wear.

Head & Hands Coverage

Hood has a button closure at the front and fits over a ball cap; thumb holes keep coverage on the backs of your hands. Made in a Fair Trade Certified™ factory.

In the fall of 2023, a request came across Material Operations Developer Mackenzie Warner’s desk: find a fabric that’s breathable and has UPF. The only problem was that the words breathable and UPF generally contradict each other.

“It’s not hard to make UPF fabric: just take a super-dense knit and it will block the sun,” says Warner. “But it’s hard to make a UPF fabric that’s comfortable. The more open the fabric is, the more air can come through ... which also means more UV light can come through.”

Warner set out to find a unicorn. Her list of parameters was daunting. The fabric had to hit 40+ UPF sun protection. It had to do so without using topical UPF treatments, which tend to wash out over time. In other words, the UPF protection had to come from the way the fabric itself was constructed. And lastly, it had to be really breathable and hit a minimum air-permeability rating of 180 cubic feet per minute. (For reference, 200 cubic feet per minute is the highest rating for fabrics.)

Warner sourced between 40 and 50 fabrics that met her first two criteria and ran air-perm tests on all of them. Only two passed. From there, it was on to field-testing for comfort and abrasion-resistance. The best material would have to feel breathable enough for anglers, climbers and endurance athletes to want to wear it all day—and would have to prove its durability against backpack hip belts, wader straps and bushwhacking.

It wasn’t long before the field-testing feedback showed a clear winner. Warner remembers her own personal aha moment, while climbing at the Buttermilks in Bishop, California. The Buttermilks are famous for massive blocks of sharp granite across a wide-open plateau, fully exposed to the piercing alpine sun—and the perfect place to test sun hoodies. “I kept falling off this one move and slamming my elbow into the rock,” says Warner. At one point, she looked down, certain the fabric had just torn. It was bloody, but whole. “My skin ripped ... but the shirt didn’t.” After a full day of hard climbing in the sun and lugging heavy crash pads through the maze of rock, she knew they’d found the unicorn.
